Income Tax - Refund of Colorado Wage Withholding

I worked in your state and had Colorado withholding taken out of my pay check. How do I receive the withholding back?

You must file a Colorado income tax return if you wish to receive a refund on wage withholding reported on your W-2 form regardless if you are a part-year, full-year or non-resident. If you have income in another state you would first fill out the 104CR or the 104PN (included in the 104 booklet) and deduct your income from another state. You would then complete a Colorado Individual Income Tax Return, form 104 to claim the Colorado refund. There is no threshold amount for filing a Colorado income tax return.

If there are no federal filing requirements, you would enter a 0 (zero) on line 1 of the 104 form for federal taxable income.
